

It all takes place at night - in the historic and isolated Gold Hill Inn...

It begins at dinner with characters from the past with stories to tell and secrets to divulge (or withhold) ...you may be sitting next to a killer.

The investigation advances to the scene of the crime next door at the rustic Bluebird Lodge where your sleuthing skills, and those who dare to join your team, are tested....and where you shall spend the night. Later, the mystery may be over...but was that creaking just an old building settling...or the nocturnal meandering of the many ghosts from a hundred plus years ago?

The next morning, survivors will saunter back down to modern civilization (or Boulder's version of) for brunch at the historic Chautauqua Dining Hall. It's a 24-hour escapade into a murderous past but time is of the essence...death will not wait.

This happens Saturday, September 21 but like Corsa, your commitment (and deposit) is required no later than June 14. There are only 9 rooms total and this event always sells out...there are no other accommodations, anywhere. It is possible to do just the dinner and mystery but that too requires advance commitment.

We'll start with a beautiful wandering drive in and around the foothills with plans to arrive about an hour before dinner. Time enough to take in the preserved yet occupied ghost town of Gold Hill...where the real hippies went when Boulder became, well, Boulder. There'll be time before dinner and the next morning to get those pics or visit one of the two other businesses...a general store and antique shop. Cherry Creek, it ain't. Sunday morning we'll "conga line" back down for an 11 AM brunch.

We'll arrive from the east in daylight, slowly, on 6 miles of flat straight but unpaved improved road. It's all drop-dead (pun intended) gorgeous terrain so 15-20 mph will not only preserve your undercarriage but also allow you to inhale the grandeur of the mountains. If you choose only the dinner the nighttime drive is 5-miles drive down a steep, dark, unmarked, unpaved road with no guard rails, sheer drop offs, and another 5-miles paved to get back down to Boulder. I lived up that canyon for 13 years and have done that night drive, but I don't recommend it.

Drop Deadline is Friday, June 14 – only 9 Rooms

Rooms ~$75 per night: Queen bed & continental breakfast (2) in the AM... the bathrooms are down the hall; there are no baths in the rooms (think 1872).

Deposit is $75 but refundable if they can rebook the room.

Mystery dinner is $65 per person; includes champagne, hors d'oeuvres, 3 course meal, and the mystery. Does not include additional alcohol, tax or gratuity. "All in" for 2 = $205

RESERVE YOUR ROOM on the Website at: www.tmc-rmc.com under Events.

Your Ghastly TMC Arranger